IS SECTARIANISM INVADING POLITICS?

The Vancouver Sun, in a powerful editorial entitled "No Holy War in Canada," pointed out some very disturbing facts. Protestant Ontario sends only eleven liberals to Parliament, while Catholic Quebec elected but four conservatives. Does this mean that sectarianism has invaded the political life of Canada? Does this mean that men go to the polls and vote not for the best man, nor for the best platform, not for the highest interests of Canada, nor for the welfare of the Empire, but for the denomination with which they happen to be affiliated? Does the state exist to promote the interest of religious factions, or does it exist to advance the welfare of the people under its rule? Cursed have been those countries in which denomination was arrayed against denomination, and Christian against Christian. Cursed have been those countries whose governments became the prizes in religious controversy. Cursed have been those countries in which the sectarian prejudices have invaded politics. The Vancouver Sun holds up Ireland as a land brought to the verge of ruin because Catholic and Protestant, disciples of a master who taught love and humility, had engaged in bitter, relentless factional disputes. Canada must not succumb to the prejudices of the hour. Canada cannot allow religious bigotries to pollute her government. Canada must steer clear from the shoals of sectarian rivalries.

Canada is an integral fact of a great empire, an empire which has ruled, and ruled effectively because it was tolerant. Under the Union Jack, Mohammedan and Hindu, Jew and Christian, Parsee and Buddhist have dwelt in safety and serenity. The British Empire, if it symbolizes anything, symbolizes the harmony that can prevail among a variety of groups and sects. Among its loyal subjects are represented all races and all creeds. Surely, then, Canadians, having before them the beautiful example of the mother-land, will not succumb to the unholy passions which perverted fanatics are arousing.

The ballot is a powerful instrument. In the hands of the religious bigot, it may become the sword which destroys and mars. In the hands of the genuine patriot, it may become the plowshare which constructs and beautifies. "No Holy War in Canada," but that tolerance for all creeds, which is British, which is Christian, which is godly. Religious differences are legitimate, but if transformed into antagonism, and released into the streams of political life, they may cause the ruin of a nation.

EIGHT YEARS AFTER

We have just commemorated the eighth anniversary of the issuance of the Balfour Declaration, which declared that the British government looked with favour on the establishment of a Jewish home in Palestine. We can still remember the frenzied cheers, and the wild excitement with which the Jewish masses greeted the news from London. After praying for Zion for many centuries, their prayers were to be realized. When the initial jubilation subsided, the enormity of the task which confronted Jewry was evident. Neglected under Arab rule, Palestine had become a desert. "The land flowing with milk and honey" was almost a waste. Only heroic efforts, and the sacrifices which idealism can bring, could reconstruct and rebuild it. It was a task which challenged the Jewish people, and to that challenge there has been a response. Especially beautiful has been the response of the Chalutzim, the pioneers, students, physicians, lawyers, the flower of European Jewish youth, who have surrendered the possibilities of a career, to dig the soil of Palestine and to lay the foundations from which later generations will benefit.

As a result chiefly of their efforts, augmented by contributions from world Jewry, Palestine has been transformed. Waste places are blooming. Beautiful colonies dot the hills of Judaea. A university functions on Mt. Scopus. Eight years have produced satisfactory results, but more is to be done. The task is but begun, and for its successful completion a united Jewry is necessary. The action of the Central Conference of American Rabbis in endorsing the Jewish Agency, and the favourable attitude of Marshal, Warburg and Brown to the Agency are harbingers that in a short time all Jews will be one in the desire to rehabilitate Palestine.

THE JEW IN ATHLETICS

The impression is quite prevalent that, while the Jew may produce athletes in the intellectual fields, he does not produce them on the gridiron, on the diamond, and on the track. It is an impression which was correct, but is so no longer. For many years there were no Jewish athletes. Athletics were unknown in the ghettoes of Europe. The ghettoes were small, cramped and overcrowded. Insufficient was the space available for homes, and consequently athletic fields or their equivalents were impossibilities. The rigors of ghetto life prevented the development of athletics. The first generation of Jews on the American continent generally bore the scars of centuries of confinement. The ghetto environment was not inducive to the development of sport champions, and though the early Jewish settlers may have gained academic distinction, they produced no athletes.

But the old order passeth. A generation of Jews reared in free lands has risen. Gone are the cramped quarters of the ghetto. Playgrounds abound. Gymnasiums are plentiful. Corner lots are available. A new environment confronted the Jew, and a different physical product was the result. Environment, despite the Nordicists, determines physical qualities. The Jew has responded to the opportunities of his new home, and the Jewish athlete has made his début. Not only in professional boxing, but in football, track, basketball and baseball, has he contributed his quota of stars. The best woman sprinter in Canada is a Jewess. As we write this, the eastern newspapers are singing the glories of Bennie Friedman, the outstanding football player of the University of Michigan, whose efforts and abilities have put his team in line for the collegiate championship of the United States. Horween, former captain of Harvard, an all-American, Glick, former captain of Princeton, an all-American, Alexander of Syracuse, an all-American, are the leading lights among a host of Jews who have won athletic distinction on the football fields. The performance of Abrahams, Olympic sprint champion, is still fresh in our minds. The Hakoach soccer football team, unbeaten in Europe, is going to tour America. Suzanne Lenglen reigns supreme in the woman's tennis world. These facts and more can be marshalled showing that the Jew has arrived in athletics. He has sloughed off the ghetto-handicaps, and in the new environment has developed physically and has produced and is producing his quota of great athletes.

ing. There are thrilling moments in the story that give us Milton Sills in his big he-man role. Apart from the dramatic interest of the plot which is all-absorbing, the film is unsurpassed for the screening of Canada's beautiful wilds. A particularly interesting concert programme has been arranged, and a clever comedy and news films will be shown.

MONUMENT NATIONAL

Frequent outbursts of applause greeted "Where is Humanity?" presented at the Monument National before an enthusiastic and appreciative audience by the Hollander Troupe of Yiddish players.

M. B. Samuylov, an actor of considerable merit who has already made many friends in Montreal, was seen to advantage in the leading role. Hanna Hollander is appealing in her portrayal of the daughter particularly in the second and third acts. Isidore Holander does good work in the role of the lover.

Ida Gropper is a convincing little mother. Adela Schwartz and Jacob Zanger keep things moving with their singing and funny little quips of humor. Effective work is also performed by Leon Seidenberg, Clara Margolin and Hyman Tauber.

FROM THE WELLS OF TALMUD

By Rabbi S. Herschorn of Montreal

The great Rabbi Akiba with his friends and disciples once passed the Holy City of Jerusalem, after the destruction of the temple. The place was still in ruins. No Roman colonia had as yet arisen to desecrate the sacred soil. Their hearts were sore to see the desolation of the spot which the Lord had chosen for His resting place. The Temple Mount was overgrown with a dense thicket, and as they passed, a fox, scared at their approach, ran out from the dense undergrowth. This scene stirred the hearts of the friends of Rabbi Akiba to tears. They burst into loud lamentations. Rabbi Akiba, however, stood unmoved and lovingly asked his wailing friends:

"Wherefore, my friends, do you weep?"

"How can we restrain our tears?" was the reply, seeing that before our eyes the words of Jeremiah are fulfilled. "The Mount of Zion is desolate, the foxes walk therein."

"Nay, my friends, rejoice rather," said Rabbi Akiba. "If the Almighty has already fulfilled His prophecy of woe, will He not speedily fulfill also His prophecy of good? For does not Jeremiah foretell as well 'And the city shall be builded again on its foundations?'"

It was the height of Rabbi Akiba's greatness and the strength of his mind that rendered to his friends this great consolation. They pursued their journey with dry eyes and exultant hearts.

A great famine had once occurred in the time of Rabbi Jehuda Hanasi, who was named rabbi.

The latter was very rich. His barns were full of grain, and he had possessions in abundance. He opened his barns of grain and declared: "This shall be for the use of those who studied the Jewish law, but not for ignorant men who have never desired to study." Rabbi Jonathan ben Amram entered and said: "Rabbi, feed me." He asked him: "My son, hast thou read the Bible?" and he said, "No." Hast thou studied the Mishna, or anything?" and he replied, "No." "Then why should I feed thee?" he answered. "Feed me as people feed a dog or a raven." Rabbi gave him what he asked, but when he went out the rabbi was sorry, saying: "Woe is to me that I have given my bread to an ignorant man." His son, Simeon, then said to him: "Perhaps this man was your disciple, Rabbi Jonathan ben Amram whose custom it is not to derive any benefit from his wisdom." It was investigated and they found that it was so. Then said Rabbi: "Henceforth, my barns shall be open to all without any distinction."

Rabbi's previous act, however, was in accordance with his theory, that chastisements are inflicted upon the world only because of the ignorant men who do not desire to study.

Mr. and Mrs. David Linsky announce the marriage of their daughter, Frieda, to Joseph Solomon on October 18. Rabbin Neches officiated.

As the result of a vegetable dinner for which 600 Jewish men and women paid $60 a plate each at the Hotel Astor in New York, sixty Jewish boys from the lower East Side will receive a three-year course in farming and agriculture at the National Farm School, a Jewish institution in Doylestown, Pa. $72,000, the interest on an endowment fund of $1,200,000, has already been raised for this year and the same sum will be attempted each year for the next three years so that 120 more boys may go to the school. As a part of the "back to the soil" movement of the school this is an excellent beginning, but it should never stop there. These boys from New York's East Side are poor and would not be able to go without financial aid, and any help given them is praiseworthy, but the number of boys is very small compared with the number that could be attracted to the farm school.

There are thousands upon thousands of Jewish boys who are not poor who might be interested in farming as a means of livelihood. The professions are becoming so over-crowded and competition in them is so sharp that they must be made into business while industrial business is scorned by youths whose grandfathers, and perhaps fathers, carried packs and established themselves as much by sweat as brains. The time must come when Jewish boys branch out into other fields than those of medicine or law. There are skilled trades for boys to learn, modern business and farming. Propaganda, the great god of this age, effects stranger things than turning the thoughts of Jewish boys from living by their wits to living by their wits and brawn as well. Let its machinery, so often set in motion for any sort of cause, be started up for the farm movement and make this movement a big, healthy factor in American Jewish life.

The Evening Telegram suffered a bad lapse from policy a few weeks ago when a classified advertisment containing the words, "no objection to English-speaking foreigner," was allowed to sully those pure columns. However, no one should hold this against the Telegram for it was an oversight due to the carelessness of some employee and can never happen again except through human fallibility. Even the spotless Telegram makes mistakes. An advertiser seeing the mistake wanted a similar advertisement run with "no objection to English-speaking foreigner" in it, but was advised that this was against the policy of the paper. Why? There are foreigners here and they have to work. There might even be people willing to give foreigners a chance to get work, knowing the handicaps they are under at best. If the Evening Telegram were the only newspaper in Toronto, it would be a closed avenue to foreigners as far as an aid to a job is concerned. What would this great moulder of public opinion like to do with those out of work? Put them on dole or let them starve?

Every now and then things happen for the particular heartening of those who believe that the world is going straight to the dogs. One of the latest stimulants may be found for them in the plan of the superintendent of the Chicago public schools to have a uniform adopted for teachers and one for students. Opponents to the idea will raise a cry against the standardization that has been called the curse of the country so many times over. They will demand to know what will happen to originality if every growing girl is forced to dress alike. But there will be no outcry from father. The idea alone should be enough to make him feel good at least for one first of the month. It costs him more to dress one Sybil than it used to cost his father to dress mama and Sarah together and if it is standardized, anything which causes him distress, it is standardized extravagance and show even among the school girls. If his daughter does it because some other daughter does, then the only thing to do is to fix them all up the same way, at least in school where it can be accomplished rather easily. The Benjamin School for Girls in New York, noted for its enrollment of wealthy Jewish daughters as much as for anything else, has adopted the French blue smock as a uniform for all the pupils and the teachers. Caroline S. Benjamin, the principal, says of it: "We find it not only economical and becoming, but an incentive to simplicity and a good step along the lines of democracy." Which is certainly all that clothes need to be and much more than they usually are.

The farm recently purchased by the Federated Jewish Farmers of Ontario, is being prepared for spring work. They have a new bank barn with a silo attached, dairy building, implement shed, six hen houses for the poultry department, and a house on the farm. The organization seeks money for seed, implements, machinery and stock, and are appealing to the Jewish people for help. There will be a drive for membership and donations in Toronto, Hamilton, Ottawa and Montreal. Fees are $3.00 per year, and may be sent to M. Saxe, Georgetown, or J. J. Glass, 171 Yonge Street, Toronto. Over fifty applications are in from Jews already in different parts of Canada, also a large number from people here who are desirous of bringing out their relatives from Europe. Smith and J. J. Glass, as well as seven farmers in various parts of Ontario. M. Saxe, of Georgetown, is president.

EDITOR APPOINTED NATIONAL EXECUTIVE SECRETARY OF THE KEREN HAYESOD

New York, November 2.—William Edlin, widely-known Jewish editor and publicist, has been appointed National Executive Secretary of the Keren Hayesod, according to an announcement just made by Morris Rothenberg, National Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Keren Hayesod.

Mr. Edlin, who has had wide experience in American-Jewish communal life, fills the vacancy in the Keren Hayesod National Administration caused by the resignation last spring of Emanuel Neumann, Executive Secretary of the Keren Hayesod for the first four years of its organization. Mr. Neumann was named Honorary Secretary.

For over twenty-five years Mr. Edlin has held prominent editorial posts with leading Jewish and non-Jewish publications. For the past ten years he was editor of "The Day," one of the foremost Jewish dailies published in this country. He is the author of many works on social, political and Jewish problems.

For many years Mr. Edlin has been active in Zionist work in this country and, in addition to writing on Zionist subjects, has been a member of the National Executive Committee of the Zionist organization of America.

Northern Ontario, now open for settlement in 160-acre blocks at fifty cents per acre, contains millions of acres of the finest agricultural land in the world. Its resources in lumber, mineral, water power, fish, game and scenery are immense. The land calls for men to cultivate it, and in return will give health, comfort and prosperity.

What settlers say of the soil, climate farming and forest life, is told in a most attractive booklet issued under the direction of the Honourable John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario. Full instructions in regards to acquiring a title to these rich agricultural lands are also given.

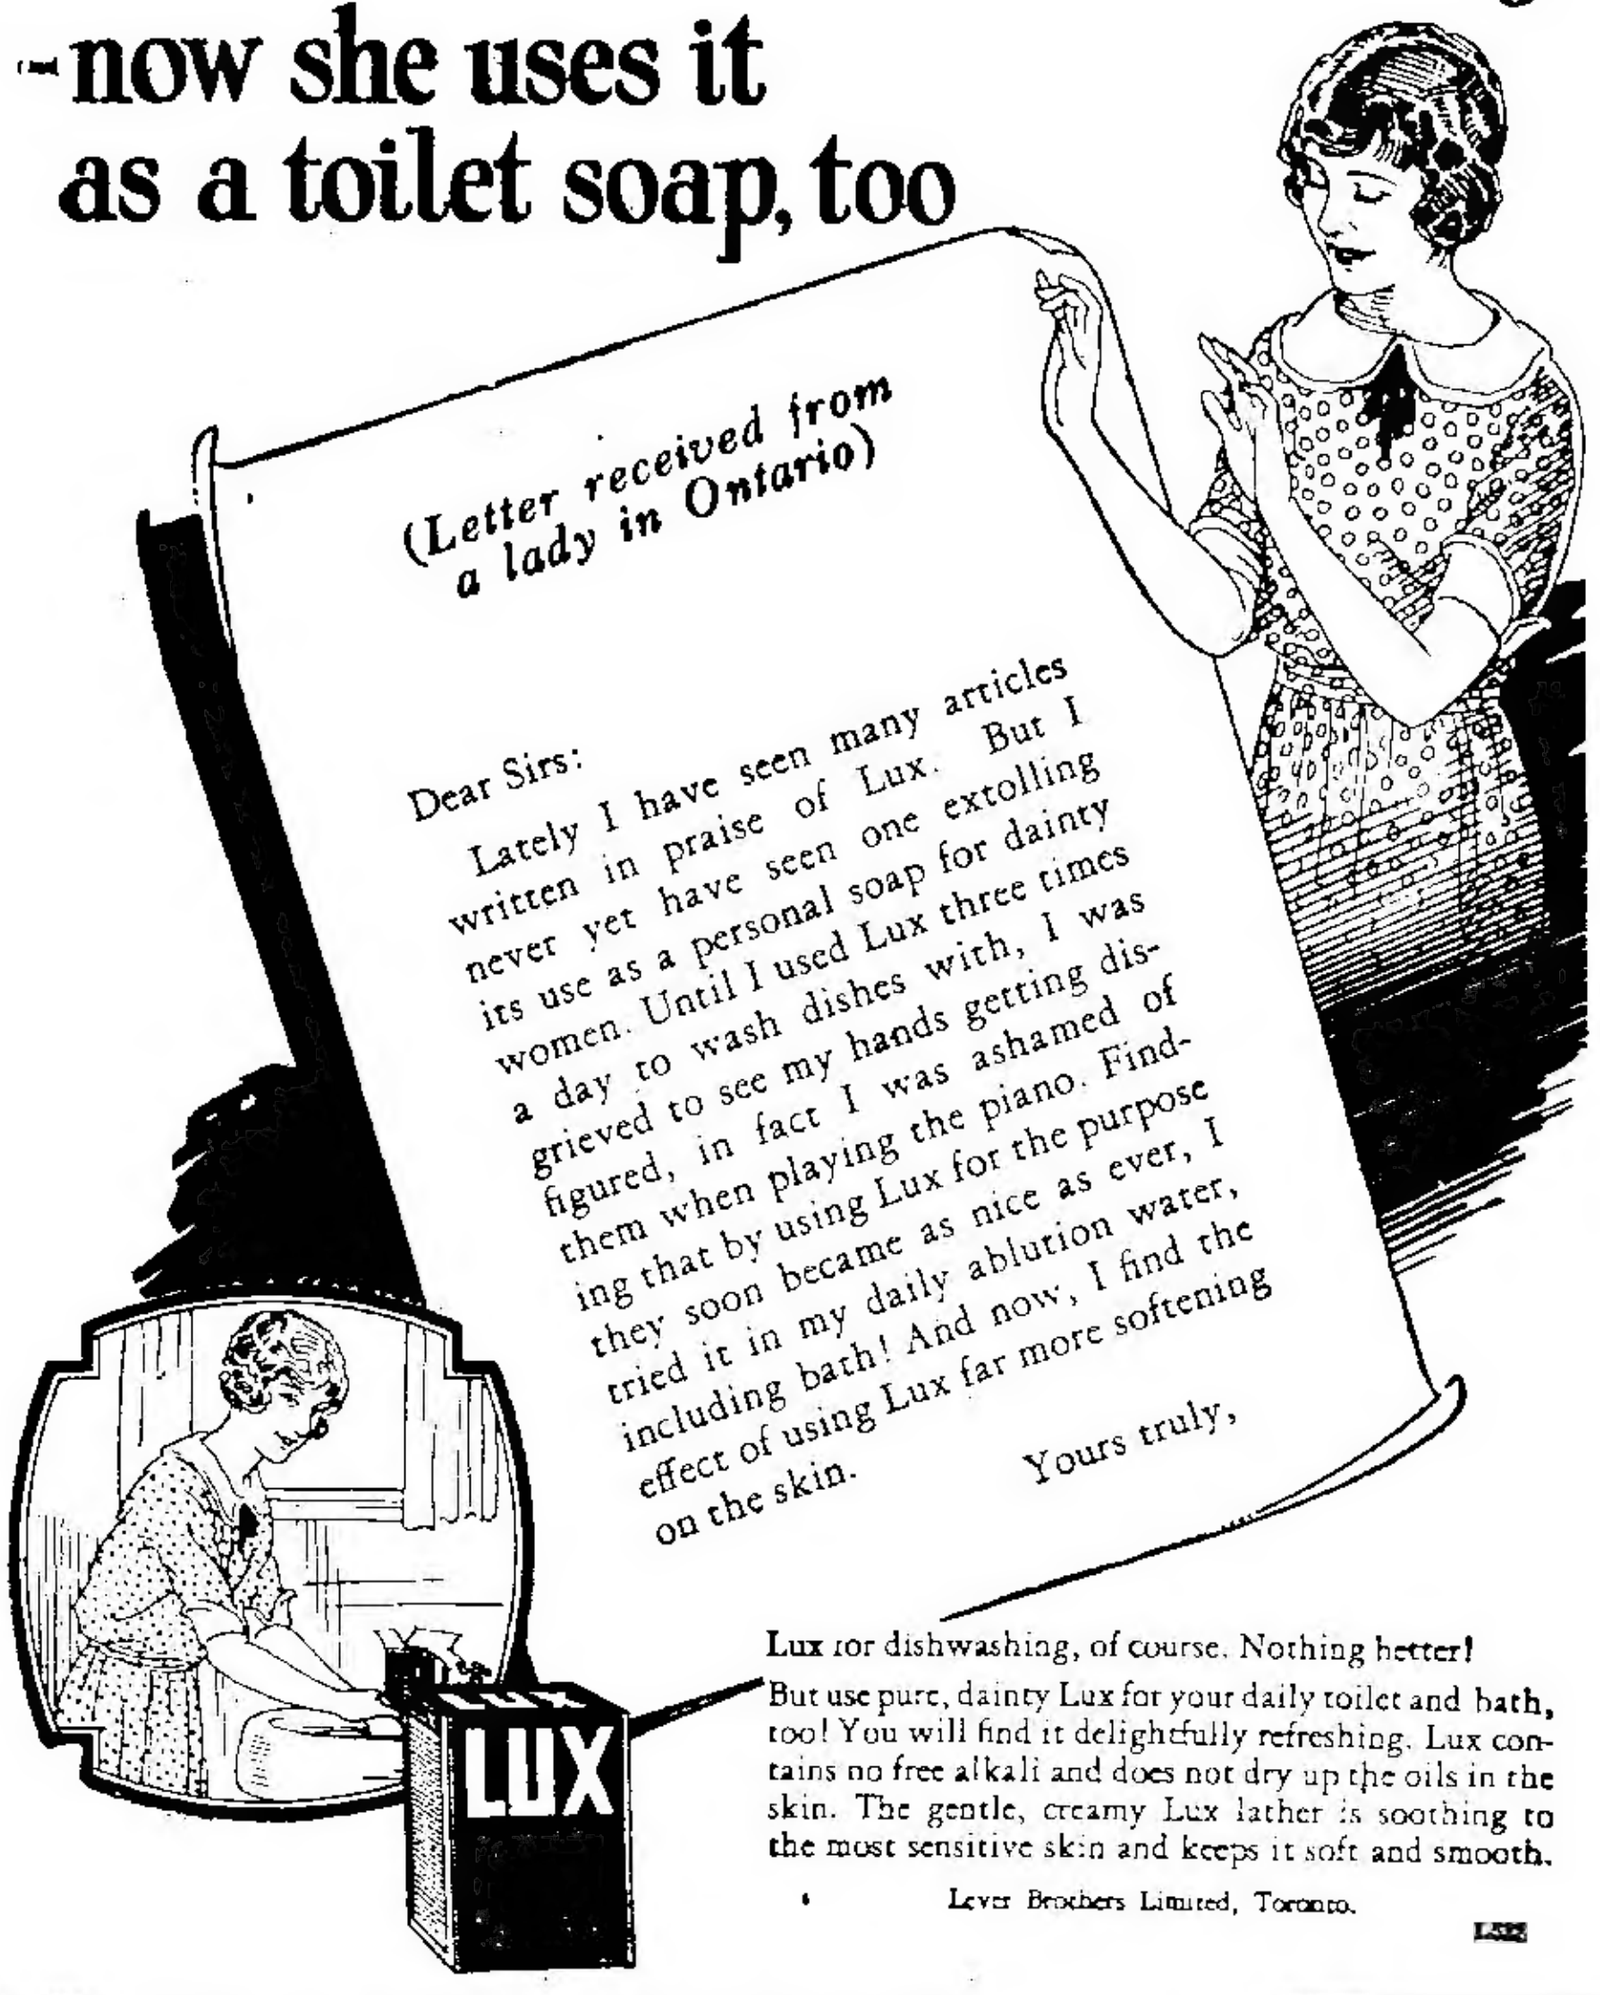
She tried Lux for dishwashing — now she uses it as a toilet soap, too



(Letter received from a lady in Ontario)
Dear Sirs:
Lately I have seen many articles written in praise of Lux. But I never yet have seen one extolling its use as a personal soap for dainty women. Until I used Lux three times a day to wash dishes with, I was grieved to see my hands getting disfigured, in fact I was ashamed of them when playing the piano. Finding that by using Lux for the purpose they soon became as nice as ever, I tried it in my daily ablution water, including bath! And now, I find the effect of using Lux far more softening on the skin.
Yours truly,
LUX

Lux for dishwashing, of course. Nothing better!

But use pure, dainty Lux for your daily toilet and bath, too! You will find it delightfully refreshing. Lux contains no free alkali and does not dry up the oils in the skin. The gentle, creamy Lux lather is soothing to the most sensitive skin and keeps it soft and smooth.

UNITED MECHANICAL SHOP

In another part of this paper you will find advertising for the United Mechanical Shop of 459-461 College Street.

F. Schlifer, the proprietor, is a European mechanic who has had thirty years' experience in this particular line of business.

In dealing with a real mechanic, have you ever noticed that his first intentions are to satisfy himself that the work is perfect, regardless whether he is paid enough or not?

There are two reasons why you should have work done by proper mechanics. The first is that it is cheaper because a good mechanic turns out a good job in less time, and you know time is worth money.

The second reason is that an inexperienced mechanic kills a lot of time and doesn' taccomplish anything because you very seldom get a good mechanic in this country. Most of them will undertake jobs although they have no experience, because they want your money.

Every person that has dealt with Mr. Schlifer knows that he has never failed in anything he undertook, and also that the few small lines that are running under his management are nothing compared to what he can really do.

Mr. Schlifer is not the kind of mechanic that gets stuck at his work. If he cannot get a certain part to replace in a repair, he makes it.

Therefore, if you require service, a job well done and at reasonable prices' we recommend F. Schlifer. Just call him at Trinity 6621.

Editor,
THE CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW.

As a Jewish veteran of the South African war and the Great War, I believe that in Toronto there are from 400 to 500 Jewish veterans. Therefore I should like to point out that it would be a great benefit to the Jews if we would form a Jewish veteran organization to show our non-Jewish people what the Jews did do for the British Empire. I have heard over and over again: "What did the Jews do in the war?" and if we could show 400 to 500 Jewish veterans in Toronto, we could prove that we have had a larger percentage of Jews in the war than our non-Jews did in Toronto. That alone would be a beneth to our people, and again don't you think it would be a good thing if 200 or 300 Jewish veterans would turn out on parade, on special occasions, carrying the Union Jack and the Jewish flags? Then our neighbours could see that the Jews have been loyal to the British Empire. What we want is a few good leaders. We have J. J. Glass, Louis Gurofsky and a good many others to call a meeting and try and make a start and no doubt it would be a good help to the Jews in Toronto.

I remain yours, etc.,
J. MORRIS.

SHEA'S

Miss Nora Bayes, the international singer of songs, is the feature attraction at Shea's next week, having returned from triumphs at the London Palladium.

The most recent revolution in Nicaragua compelled Senor Zelaya to abdicate. Unlike most of his successors, he had not amassed a fortune and, therefore, when he and his son reached America, they were left entirely to their own resources. Senor Zelaya was graduated with high honours from a foreign conservatoire. This accomplishment enabled Don Alfonso Zelaya to earn a livelihood for himself and family.

Hugh Herbert is an actor-author. He has written sketches for himself and for many other players. His newest vehicle for his own use is called "Solomon's Children." Johnny Sully and Muriell Thomas will be seen in a laughable episode entitled "Beauty, Youth and Folly." Miss Thomas is a beauty. Both have youth and their frolic consists of patter, song and dance.

La Salle Hassan and Moral call themselves Cyclonic Comiques. They are a trio of cyclonic tumblers.

Trado Twins in "A Delectable Dance Divertissement," "The Act Beautiful," featuring "Lillie," a pure white Arabian mare, and English setter dogs in group artistic statuary, and an Aesop fable complete the programme.

EMPIRE

Bert Bertrand, the featured comedian with "Wine, Woman and Song" which will be seen week of November 9 at the Empire Theatre, has always been and always will be a stickler for naturalness in putting over comedy parts. It is to this that he attributed the large part of his success as a burlesque comedian. "The grotesque," said Mr. Bertrand "belongs more to the extravaganza and the pantomime and unless the fine line is drawn somewhere, the one becomes merely the clowning of the other." Lewis Talbot has entrusted the staging of "Wine, Woman and Song" to Bert rand and to the end that he has made every line, every song and every en semble count. The usual chorus girls contest will be staged Thursday night

I Have Found Myself

By Ludwig Lewisohn

In the near future, Boni and Liveright will publish a book called "Israel," written by Ludwig Lewisohn, author of "Upstream," and one of the world's foremost literary figures. This article, which is part of "Israel," appears in THE CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW for the first time. . . . .THE EDITOR.

We are a people. This is the potent fact which our American assimilationist is tempted to deny. And his denial is often quite sincere. For the content of his consciousness is completely western, completely American. But there is that consciousness itself; there are the instincts with which one grasps the world of appearances. That consciousness, those instincts are shaped in each human being by the experience of his kind, his people. The subconsciousness of our assimilationist has not forgotten exile and terror, the knife, the fagot, the long days in the house of study, the exclusion of the menacing external world, the isolation, the Messianic hope. Like any Bocher in the Polish Ghetto of to-day, he is precocious, intellectually passionate, incapable of moral compromise—almost scoundrel or almost saint—given to dreams and schemes of world betterment, choked with inhibitions, anxieties, uncertainties. . . . . He assimilated? Has he ever really envisaged the members of his football team at college? Has he ever grasped that happy, pagan ease, that at-homeness in Zion, that uninhibited straightness of instinctive activities, that blithe and natural acceptance of this gaudy, brave, foolish, maddening, lovable world of flivvers and flirting and cutting classes, of rooting and loyalty and play? Why was he active in scientific or literary clubs, madly ambitious intellectually, earnest about world-reform? And if he took the last step, if he himself played football, was it not an anticipatory gesture against the reproach of Jewish physical sloth?

He cannot shake off the impress of the experience of seventy generations. Seventy generations! Let him once reflect on the racial and national experience of the fathers of the captain of his football team, then on that of his own fathers and on the relations of the two. The point is too simple to be laboured. It is assimilation that would be the miracle, the break in the eternal chain of causality. . . Our assimilationist may never think a Jewish thought or read a Jewish book. In the essential character of all his passions as well as of all his actions he remains a Jew. . . . The groundwork of Jewish character is his; the terrible post-exilic experience is his; he remains a strange mixture of passionate prophet and beaten cur, leader and outcast. If he has forgotten the call to "restore the preserved of Israel," he throws himself into the business of giving "a light to the Gentiles." He is liberal, reformer, practitioner or patron of the arts; he makes discoveries in medicine or, as a lawyer, pleads the causes of those for whom none will plead. If he does none of these things he is a sordid scoundrel. But the sordid scoundrels are a minority. The average decent Jew in business, in the professions, in journalism or the arts, sustains a perceptible relation to the prophets of his people. . . .

Despite himself, then, the assimilationist is a Jew by character and by national experience. Nor must it be forgotten, though he himself tries eagerly to forget it, that the nature of the national experience has undergone no essential but only accidental change. I venture the assertion that there is to-day in the entire Aryan world no recognizable Jew who in his childhood, in street or school, has not been taunted with his Jewishness, made by some slight, gesture, word, to feel excluded and inferior and has not thus received a spiritual wound that is incurable. Incurable by himself, incurable by his fellows, incurable by Gentile friendship, kindness, respect, co-operation, love. An inner censor may try to force that moment of childhood into forgetfulness. Its imprint remains. From it arises the compensatory eagerness for success; from it are born artists, reformers, financiers; from it arise the fervour of poets, the generosity of philanthropists, the prodigality of the vulgar, the mercilessness of the usurer—all those imperious and exorbitant extremes to which for both good and ill, the Jew is prone. Since he cannot be an equal, it is his will to become superior to the mass of men. Only irresistible brute violence can make a slave of him.

Nor is that childhood moment and its consequences the only unchanged element in the national experience. The invitation to assimilate in every respect except the narrowly religious which has been extended to the Jew in Western Europe and America is in itself not sincere. I do not mean that it is consciously hypocritical. Nor do I forget those thousands of liberals, especially in America, who would welcome Jewish assimilation. The nation as a whole, while demanding assimilation, resists it. Were the invitation to assimilate sincere, schools, colleges, societies, associations, clubs, legislatures could not be too full of Jews to please non-Jewish Americans. The minority's fullest and most unrestricted co-operation in the national life would be welcomed. For the measure of that co-operation would be the measure of the Jew's Americanism. But I have only to state the necessary consequences of a sincere invitation to assimilate, to expose the absurdity of its present pretensions. As the world is constituted to-day no majority desires minority assimilation; it desires minority servitude. It wants uniformity of taste, character, instinct in the national life, not multiformity. It wants minorities to keep quiet, obedient, unobtrusive and to fight for the meagre privilege of remaining so in case the country goes to war. Thus, to take an amusing but symbolical instance, a critic like Stuart P. Sherman, who, in a manner so well bred, yet so decisive, deprecates the Jewish co-operation in American thought and letters would be the first to tell Jewish thinkers and writers at the appropriate moment that it is lovely and becoming to die for the fatherland. . . .

No, assimilation is impossible. It is impossible because the Jew cannot change his national character; he cannot, by wishing it, abandon himself any more than the members of any other folk can do so. It is impossible, also, because time cannot be turned back, history relived, the Jew permitted to share the national experiences of the people among whom he has lived for so many centuries. He is the product to-day of the impact of millennial experiences upon his original character. Were the invitation to assimilate sincere, were the Jew to be permitted really to share the national life and experiences of the American people for ten centuries, or five, or three—a different story might be told. In a nationalistic, war-like world that supposition is, even for America, chimerical and absurd.
